GUIDANCE FOR SCHOOLS:

Identification of children at risk of sexual exploitation

(May 2015)

There is much to learn and we are all learning

A recent inquiry undertaken by the Office of the Children's Commissioner reported that at least 16,500 children were identified as being at risk of children sexual exploitation during one year.¹ The same research also estimates that the actual numbers of children at risk of and suffering child sexual exploitation are much higher because professionals in the study did not always recognise and respond appropriately to the issue. Schools are well placed to prevent, identify and respond to children at risk of sexual exploitation. This guidance aims to raise the awareness of child sexual exploitation in order to support education professionals to identify and respond appropriately to pupils at risk.

What is Child Sexual Exploitation?

The sexual exploitation of children and young people (CSE) under-18 is defined as that which:

'involves exploitative situations, contexts and relationships where young people (or a third person or persons) receive 'something' (e.g. food, accommodation, drugs, alcohol, cigarettes, affection, gifts, money) as a result of them performing, and/or another or others performing on them, sexual activities.

Child sexual exploitation can occur through the use of technology without the child's immediate recognition; for example being persuaded to post sexual images on the Internet/mobile phones without immediate payment or gain. In all cases, those exploiting the child/young person have power over them by virtue of their age, gender, intellect, physical strength and/or economic or other resources. Violence, coercion and intimidation are common, involvement in exploitative relationships being characterised in the main by the child or young person's limited availability of choice resulting from their social/economic and/or emotional vulnerability.' (DfE, 2012)

¹ "I thought I was the only one. The only one in the world." The Office of the Children's Commissioner's Inquiry into Child Sexual Exploitation in Gangs & Groups: Interim Report (November 2012)

Child sexual exploitation is a form of abuse which involves children (male and female, of different ethnic origins and of different ages) receiving something in exchange for sexual activity.

Who is at risk?

Child sexual exploitation can happen to any young person from any background. Although the research suggests that the females are more vulnerable to CSE, boys and young men are also victims of this type of abuse.

The characteristics common to all victims of CSE are not those of age, ethnicity or gender, rather their powerlessness and vulnerability. Victims often do not recognise that they are being exploited because they will have been groomed by their abuser(s). As a result, victims do not make informed choices to enter into, or remain involved in, sexually exploitative situations but do so from coercion, enticement, manipulation or fear. Sexual exploitation can happen face to face and it can happen online. It can also occur between young people.

In all its forms, CSE is child abuse and should be treated as a child protection issue.

WARNING SIGNS AND VULNERABILITIES CHECKLIST²

The evidence available points to several factors that can increase a child's vulnerability to being sexually exploited. The following are typical vulnerabilities in children prior to abuse:

- Living in a chaotic or dysfunctional household (including parental substance use, domestic violence, parental mental health issues, parental criminality)
- History of abuse (including familial child sexual abuse, risk of forced marriage, risk of 'honour'-based violence, physical and emotional abuse and neglect)
- Recent bereavement or loss
- Gang association either through relatives, peers or intimate relationships (in cases of gang-associated CSE only)
- Attending school or a setting with young people who are sexually exploited
- Learning disabilities or complex needs
- Disabilities (including Visual and Hearing Impairments)
- Unsure about their sexual orientation or unable to disclose sexual orientation to their families
- Friends with young people who are sexually exploited
- Homeless
- Lacking friends from the same age group
- Living in a gang neighbourhood
- Living in residential care
- Living in hostel, bed and breakfast accommodation or a foyer
- Low self-esteem or self-confidence
- Young carer

² The Office of the Children's Commissioner (2012) Interim Report - Inquiry into Child Sexual Exploitation in Group and Gangs.

The following signs and behaviour are generally seen in children who are already being sexually exploited.

- Missing from home or care
- Physical injuries
- Drug or alcohol misuse
- Involvement in offending
- Repeat sexually-transmitted infections, pregnancy and terminations
- Absent from school (full days or for periods during the day)
- Evidence of sexual bullying and/or vulnerability through the internet and/or social networking sites
- Estranged from their family
- Receipt of gifts from unknown sources
- Recruiting others into exploitative situations
- Poor mental health
- Self-harm
- Thoughts of or attempts at suicide
- Dress
- Older boyfriend or friendship group
- Sofa surfing

Evidence shows that any child displaying several vulnerabilities from the above lists should be considered to be at high risk of sexual exploitation. If you identify a child who you consider to be suffering from or at high risk of CSE, it is important that the Senior Designated Professional (SDP) in school is informed so that they can contact Children's Services.

Consent

The report from the Office of the Children's Commissioner also highlights confusion about issues of consent to sexual activity amongst professionals and victims of CSE. Professionals frequently described victims of sexual exploitation as being 'promiscuous', 'liking the glamour', engaging in 'risky behaviour' and generally presenting with challenging behaviour.

In assessing whether a child or young person is a victim of sexual exploitation, or at risk of becoming a victim, careful consideration should be given to the issue of consent³. It is important to bear in mind that:

- a child under the age of 13 is not legally capable of consenting to sex (it is statutory rape) or any other type of sexual touching;
- sexual activity with a child under 16 is also an offence;
- it is an offence for a person to have a sexual relationship with a 16 or 17 year old if they hold a position of trust or authority in relation to them;
- where sexual activity with a 16 or 17 year old does not result in an offence being committed, it may still result in harm, or the likelihood of harm being suffered;

³ <http://www.dailymail.co.uk/femail/article-3088289/Clever-video-teaches-powerful-lesson-consensual-sex-comparing-making-cup-tea.html>

- non consensual sex is rape whatever the age of the victim; and
- If the victim is incapacitated through drink or drugs, or the victim or his or her family has been subject to violence or the threat of it, they cannot be considered to have given true consent and therefore offences may have been committed.

Child sexual exploitation is therefore potentially a child protection issue for all children under the age of 18 years and not just those in a specific age group.

What can schools do to tackle Child Sexual Exploitation?

1. Training and Awareness

The SDP should ensure that all staff and volunteers who work with children and young people are made aware of Child Sexual Exploitation and the indicators of concern in order to identify and respond to concerns at an early stage. In addition to providing this written guidance to staff, training materials regarding Child Sexual Exploitation are available on the Schools' Website.

2. Promotion of healthy relationships through the curriculum

Educational institutions play an important role in helping children and young people gain an understanding of acceptable and unacceptable relationships and sexual behaviour and to gain a sense of self-worth and respect for others. The PSHE curriculum, including Sex and Relationship Education (SRE), provides a vehicle for this important learning which can help prevent children and young people becoming involved in sexual exploitation. A resource map outlining recommended materials is available as an Appendix to this document.

By enabling children and young people to explore what makes a safe and healthy relationship, schools can help to develop the awareness and skills to recognise and manage potential risks of harm, stay safe and seek help if they need it. It is important that this message is repeated throughout a child's time at school to support prevention through the promotion of safe practices. Both primary and secondary schools have a vital role to play in this preventive education and awareness raising.

3. Identification

Schools may wish to map pupils against the CSE vulnerabilities checklist provided in this document and target interventions appropriately with regular review.

In addition, schools should be vigilant to the link between children going missing and absences and the risk of CSE. The Designated Safeguarding Lead (DSL) should ensure that attendance staff and those monitoring truancy during the school day are fully briefed on CSE and monitor/log unexplained absences and those pupils leaving during the school day with the potential for CSE in mind.

Many schools ensure a staff presence at entrances/exits to the school at the beginning and end of the school day. These staff should be mindful of who is dropping-off and collecting pupils; gather details, including vehicle registration, if there are any concerns.

4. Steps that schools can take to address Child Sexual Exploitation

- There are a number of practical steps that schools can take to ensure good practice in relation to identifying and responding to the problem of child sexual exploitation. Examples include:
- Identify a lead Governor and member of staff for child sexual exploitation to provide governance and scrutiny on how the school is dealing with child sexual exploitation and to give all school staff a single point of contact to report or find out more information about child sexual exploitation.
- Poor attendance and lateness to school or sudden changes to attendance can be an early indication of child sexual exploitation or other problems within the family home. Attendance officers within the school can closely monitor attendance and take action where necessary. If all periods of absence are followed up with a conversation with a parent to ascertain the reasons for the absence, problems can be identified and responded to before they escalate. Schools should consider whether using recorded messages to report absences can exacerbate the problem. Attendance clubs before school have proven to be an effective way of improving pupils' attendance. Unauthorised absences from school by vulnerable pupils should initiate a face-to-face meeting with a member of staff, preferably a safeguarding lead.
- Often the best way of finding out what is going on in the life of a young person is via their friends. If there is a risk that a young person is being exploited or groomed then it is likely their friends will be concerned and may disclose information regarding this.
- Heads of Year has a crucial role to play in understanding and responding to child sexual exploitation. Regular meetings between the Head of Year, other teaching and pastoral staff and pupils will provide lots of opportunities for changes in behaviour to be noted and concerns about young people reported.
- Child protection lead officers within the school and / or teaching staff should be present at all Child Protection conferences involving young people from that school.
- Where a school has an Inclusion Mentor (or similar role) they should meet regularly with Child Protection lead officers and / or designated safeguarding leads to share information and concerns about pupils within that school.
- Police officers and PCSOs are a tremendous resource for a school, both in terms of dealing with criminal incidents in school and for providing advice and support to pupils and teachers in relation to matters of the law within school. Should any child sexual exploitation concerns about a pupil be raised, the police officer can access Police databases to obtain information and intelligence about any suspected perpetrators.
- Education Welfare Officers (EWOs) and the MASH team are also a fantastic resource for the school. MACSE can also be contacted. See page 16 for further details

- Ensure staff have relevant continuing professional development (CPD) on child sexual exploitation so that all staff know what it is, what warning signs to look out for and how to report it within the school and to external agencies including Greater Manchester Police.
- All children and young people are at risk of online sexual exploitation and schools should ensure that their e-safety procedures are robust and that pupils are taught about online risks, appropriate behaviour, how to recognise unsafe online contact and be confident to report any concerns about themselves or peers to staff in school.
- Ensure that the topic of healthy relationships is covered in PSHE in every year group, particularly focusing on the subjects of consent, abuse and power in relationships. Ensure that there are sufficient age-appropriate resources to support this work in the classroom.
- Provide information for parents about child sexual exploitation which can be delivered through information sessions, printed materials and signposting to relevant services
- There are a number of computer software packages that can be used to help protect students from cyberbullying, online grooming, explicit images, harmful websites and other threats. Refer to appendix.
- By putting school staff at the school entrance or road at the start and end of the school day enables schools to identify any unusual or concerning behaviour, particularly pupils receiving lifts from unrelated adults, gang members or other individuals of concern. This practice also helps the police from an evidential perspective should any offences be committed.

5. General advice for all school staff

1. Familiarise yourself with the warning signs and always consider the risk of sexual exploitation when working with young people and carrying out assessments. "If you can't rule it out, rule it in," advises Carlene Firmin, assistant director of Barnardo's
2. Share warning signs with other agencies, including police, health, EWOs, Social Care and teachers, to build up a picture of the young person's circumstances. This will help assess the risk and can be done via your local authority's children's services department or through the specialist child sexual exploitation teams listed above.
3. See your local safeguarding children board's website to find local multi-agency procedures. <http://www.devonsafeguardingchildren.org/>
4. If you are concerned a child or young person is at risk do not hesitate to make an enquiry to MASH making sure that you have used the Threshold Tool
5. Listen to children and take their disclosures or difficult behaviour seriously.
6. If another professional, such as a teacher or specialist project worker, tells you they are making a referral about a child who has been exploited, or is at risk, action it.

7. Seek out opportunities for staff training in relation to child sexual exploitation.

6. How to Respond

- If you are aware of a pupil being picked up by older males/females who are not relatives – take the car number plate
- Talk to parents – do they know these people?
- If a pupil is excessively on their mobile phone – if they won't be parted – don't think discipline – think why?
- Ask the question has this pupil made friendship changes and are they under other pressures?
- Take a note of names used- they may be nicknames but it all helps
- Plot the friendships with a genogram
- Ensure all staff are aware of the dangers of sexual exploitation
- Use the lesson plan to talk about grooming with all year groups – the pupils are never too young to start
- Have the helpline posters/leaflets available around the school – BLAST, PACE (Parents Against Child Exploitation)
- Make parents aware of the signs via newsletters and the school website

7. How to talk to parents

Before you have this conversation, check:

- Will a discussion with a parent or carer place the child at an immediate risk of significant harm?
- What should the outcomes be from this meeting?
- Who will attend?

Gentle introduction to the subject - The first thing they will want to know is why they are there. Start the conversation with your concerns about the welfare and emotional wellbeing of their child. Remember, any parent will feel particularly distressed that their child had been suffering from abuse for some time before it was discovered or disclosed. Don't attack or be judgemental.

Discuss possible signs of alarm:

- a drop in their attainment
- their punctuality is poor
- their attendance has deteriorated
- Their appearance has deteriorated.

Find out what the parents are aware of - Some parents may be suspicious of what is happening but not sure what to do, others may not recognise the situation as a dangerous problem and others may be completely in the dark. Are they (the child or young person) complying with the family's expectations and rules?

- Are there firm boundaries at home with time keeping and general parenting?

- Are they contactable at all times?
- Who are they associating with? Have you met their friends'/associates' parents and do you know where they live?
- Have new friends bought them new objects (mobile devices, credit for phone, jewellery, substances)?
Are they spending less time at home and more with friends, especially staying out overnight?

Controlling the situation - The very words 'child sexual exploitation' are likely to cause fear, panic, guilt and defensiveness in parents and carers. Face to face conversations are most effective as you can capture their facial expressions and body language. It also shows the school takes the matter seriously and wants to work with the parents and carers to put an end to it, not against them.

Clear explanations - When it comes to suggesting that you think their child is being sexually exploited, be firm and professional and choose your words carefully. Make sure you clearly explain:

- what CSE is
- how all children can be vulnerable as targets
- the process of grooming and how their child may refuse to see what is happening to them as wrong
- Show how the signs that you have already talked them through point towards CSE, this will make your reason for concern much more justified and difficult to disprove.
- Consider providing parent workshops regarding safety to raise awareness.

Essential information

- Suggest referring the case to MASH and give them contact details – make it clear here that there is additional support of multi-agency working i.e. police, school and health
- If the parents want to talk to their child about the situation, advise that this must be done with absolute care. Often the child will not realise what is happening or will be scared and likely to lash out or reject help if they feel pressured.

Minimum Expectations for Schools and Settings: Checklist

It is important that children receive the right help at the right time. For that to happen, everyone who comes in contact with children in school has a role to play in identifying concerns early, sharing information and taking prompt, informed action. Therefore all professionals in schools should be vigilant and act quickly when they suspect a child is suffering, or is likely to suffer, harm.

Working Together, 2013

In June 2015 the DSCB education sub group and other education specialists met to discuss the most effective way for schools and education settings to identify and support children at risk of likely to be victims of child sexual exploitation. These are the – minimum expectations that were identified:

Standard	In place	Action	When Named lead for CSE
Annual CSE awareness raising training/briefing for all staff and volunteers inc. governors, specific training for care/pastoral staff ensure staff are warned of the danger of making value judgements about pupils' behaviours (behaviour is the manifestation of something happening)
CSE report included in annual report to Governors
Evidence monitoring and evaluation

by GB and SLT
CSE training at induction
Ensure that children have been consulted and given the opportunity to provide input
All schools to have an e.safety/ cse section on their website for pupils, parents and staff
PSHE curriculum for all students that provides regular and progressive content <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ○ Sex and Relationship Education ○ Drugs and alcohol ○ CSE, stranger danger, personal safety ○ E.safety ○ Self -esteem and citizenship ○ Risk assessing ○ Concept of safety ○ Emotional Wellbeing
Engagement with other agencies
Schools to be held to account by DSCB/DCC for not completing or non-compliance on safeguarding audit or non-attendance at ICPC, core group meetings – formal warnings imposed
Regular briefing for parents to include CSE and e.safety
Robust transition packages EY – KS1,

KS2-3, KS4-FE and mid-phase KS1-KS2
Identification of vulnerable pupils with targeted intervention programmes including raising self-esteem and awareness recording of actions and outcomes
Every child is empowered to say 'no' or 'stop' (through training and awareness, also schools can distribute leaflets, posters and contact details of agencies that can help)
Robust intimate care procedures that are appropriate, respectful and minimise the potential for desensitisation
All children have access to advocacy
Ensure that there is a Safeguarding Governor
Ensure that the Lead Governor is aware of, and carries out, their role in ensuring minimum expectations are met.
Mentor programmes
Support available for parents and carers

Other suggestions

- Section on DSCB website to display good practice and outcomes from schools and settings

- All agencies to have a good awareness of TOTAL communication systems and are empowered to communicate with all children. (Children with learning disabilities and physical impairments)
- Multi-agencies have heightened 'alert' systems to effectively link information regarding the most vulnerable, in order to act rapidly and effectively (use of UPN number in MASH/MACSE)
- All agencies and school staff to have an awareness of disability to ensure that disability/impairment is never used to explain away issues that may be masking abuse and/or misunderstand signs of distress.
- Police/SW to ascertain if a child has a disability and/or needs support before conducting any interview
- Packages of support and resources for schools to include flowchart and glossary – differentiated for each phase
- Attend termly safeguarding forums
- Schools will review staffing to ensure change happens and that particular staff do not become over familiar with pupils – especially when supporting pupils intimate and personal care routines.
- Staff to have clear guidelines on over familiarisation (including Social Media).
- Provide separate section on responsibilities for Governors and lead Governors.

Threshold Tool

The tool can also be used to prioritise and develop a range of support and intervention strategies matched to the needs and strengths of the child, young person, and family.

The descriptors and indicators are indicative rather than definitive, but will help to provide an evidence base for professional judgement and decision making.

The descriptors and indicators cannot reflect or predict sudden changes in the child's world and any sudden change in a child's presentation should be explored to establish if there is a cause for concern.

In addition, the age of the child and any protective factors that may enhance resilience need to be taken into account.

The lack of impact as a result of previous or on-going service involvement should also be noted as a concern.

The Threshold Matrix on page 6 of this document can be used to create a profile of individual needs and vulnerability. It is not necessary to complete all areas of the matrix if you do not have the evidence to do so and it is not an area of concern.

The needs of children and young people rarely fit into neat categories, and often change over time. The threshold matrix has been designed to inform the early identification of vulnerability and need and can be used to start the process to clarify concerns and/or monitor progress.

Appendix 1: Tackling Child Sexual Exploitation: Resource Map for Schools

These resources have been compiled to support schools to raise awareness of issues related to child sexual exploitation and to promote healthy relationships through the curriculum. Tackling abusive behaviour and sexist attitudes that perpetuate sexual violence against children and young people should, however, be addressed on a continuing basis as part of the whole school culture, and not just as ‘one-off’ exercises.

Please note that the authors have tried to check all resources for suitability but this has not always been possible and some have come with recommendations, therefore, please can teachers always check resources first before using and consider appropriateness for the age range of their children.
